

Who's Who in Greek Mythology A guide to the characters who inspired HADESTOWN

Orpheus— son of the muse of epic poetry, engaged to marry Eurydice. With his charming voice and lyre, Orpheus charmed all living things, even rocks and stones.

Eurydice— a dryad, or tree nymph, engaged to marry Orpheus. On the day of their wedding she was bitten by a poisonous snake, died, and descended into the Underworld.

Hades— God of the dead, ruler of the Underworld, sometimes called "The Wealthy One." He fell in love with, abducted, and married Persephone. Her mother, the goddess of harvest, refused to bless the world when Persephone was below.

Persephone— Goddess of the seasons, flowers, fruit, and grain. By arrangement, she spent half the year with Hades in the Underworld, causing fall and winter above. The other half, she returned to her mother, bringing spring and summer with her.

Hermes— Fleet-footed, guide, messenger of the Gods, and conductor of souls to the Underworld. In some tellings, it was Hermes who taught Orpheus to play the Lyre

Fates— Three goddesses who together determined the destinies of mortals, measuring their lifespans and apportioning their suffering.

Chorus— In ancient Greek theater, the chorus sang, danced, and spoke in unison. Often representing the voice of the citizens, the Chorus commented on the actions of characters and served as an emotional conduit to the audience.
